History & Mission: FCI Cumberland became operational in April 1994, housing its first prison camp inmates the following October and the first medium-security inmates in March 1995.

The Federal Correctional Institution in Cumberland houses medium security male offenders. The FCI has an adjacent minimum security satellite camp that houses male offenders.

The Federal Bureau of Prisons protects society by confining offenders in the controlled environments of prisons and community-based facilities that are safe, humane, cost-efficient and appropriately secure, and that provide work and other self-improvement opportunities to assist offenders in becoming law-abiding citizens.
